

Since the 1970s, the North Carolina Area Health Education Centers (NC AHEC) Program has provided short-term lodging for health science students who are completing community-based rotations in North Carolina. Students are not required to use AHEC housing and it is not meant to replace or serve as a student's permanent residence. Our goal is to make community-based education at clinical sites more accessible.

NC AHEC Housing Locations

We provide student housing in 50 counties and approximately 60 towns and cities across the state. The majority of AHEC housing is provided through apartments and AHEC-owned lodging, but private residences are also utilized, especially in rural areas.

Any health science student may apply for housing through our online portal at my.ncahec.net. Once an application is received, the student will receive further instructions from a regional AHEC.
